Brad Simpson

Brad Simpson is assistant professor of history and international affairs at Princeton University and author of Economists with Guns: Authoritarian Development and U.S.-Indonesian Relations (2008), which has just been translated into Indonesian. He is currently working on two book projects, one exploring U.S.-Indonesian-international relations during the Suharto era (1966-1998) and another examining the history of the idea self-determination, exploring its political, cultural and legal descent through post 1945 US foreign relations and international politics. He also directs the Indonesia and East Timor Documentation Project at the National Security Archive.
