From the conflicts in Afghanistan and Libya to the AIDS pandemic and global climate change, nations shape world politics through conflict and cooperation. In the 21st century, however, states are not only the significant actors: powerful social, economic, technological, and environmental forces increasingly connect, align, and divide individuals around the planet. To understand the complex interactions among all these actors and forces requires careful and thoughtful analysis.

The Burkle Center’s mission is to provide that analysis and to bring to the UCLA and Los Angeles communities the best and brightest minds in the fields of international relations and foreign policy.

The Burkle Center draws together faculty and students from across UCLA in an effort to explore and shape debate on global issues. We are the primary forum for the interdisciplinary study of international affairs at UCLA and a significant sponsor of research, teaching, and outreach on campus. I encourage you to explore our website, attend our events, and contribute to our efforts to better understand our world.

Kal Raustiala
Director, UCLA Burkle Center for International Relations
Professor, UCLA Law School & UCLA International Institute
This report offers highlights from the Burkle Center’s 2010-11 academic year. The Center hosted diplomats, journalists, authors, and academics. Burkle Center talks covered topics ranging from international law of lethal force and the outsourcing of war and peace to partisan financial cycles, hedge funds, and the economic crisis at large.

The Center co-sponsored film screenings and responded to critical current events. Our Lecture Series featured Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Admiral Mike Mullen, author and editor Leon Wieseltier and Nobel Prize-winning economist Joseph Stiglitz.

The Burkle Center Annual Conference Can Iran Come In From The Cold: Iran & the International Community in the 21st Century was co-sponsored by the UCLA International Institute and assembled a distinguished line-up of experts to explore Iran’s relations both regionally and on the greater world stage.

Our Internship Program concluded another successful year. Twelve undergraduate and graduate interns benefitted from unparalleled networking opportunities with scholars and practitioners, acquired valuable professional skills, and enriched their academic learning. Student interns are an integral part of the Center, and we are grateful for their dedication.

Two international career panels introduced students to career and internship opportunities in the field of international relations, from diplomacy and foreign journalism, to international human rights and microfinance.

A central part of our mission is supporting the research of UCLA students and faculty. This year the Burkle Center awarded two Alice Belkin Memorial Scholarships to outstanding minority graduate students and supported faculty research on diplomatic signaling, cyberspace and diaspora politics, and US-EU approaches to environmental regulation. We also grew our roster of fellows, adding former Air Force interrogator Matthew Alexander, author of Kill or Capture, to our existing team of national security expert Amy Zegart, former foreign minister of Thailand Kantathi Suphamongkhon, and former NATO Supreme Allied Commander Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.).

The Burkle Center for International Relations is part of the UCLA International Institute, which serves as the focal point for international research, teaching, and community outreach at UCLA.
The conference considered Iran’s relations both regionally and on the greater world stage. Iran is an important player in world politics, but has faced extensive censure and sanctions from the broader system of states, including a wide array of United Nations Security Council sanctions. Most recently, the US and other states thwarted Iran’s bid to join the new UN women’s rights agency. Can Iran become a more ‘normal’ state in the near future? How can relations between Iran and the great powers be improved? What can the United States do to engage Iran constructively?

Conference Program

Welcome and Opening Remarks

Panel I: Bringing States Back In

Panelists: Charles Kupchan, Georgetown University and the Council on Foreign Relations; Bruce Jentleson, Duke University; Etel Solingen, UC Irvine

Moderator: Kal Raustiala, UCLA

Panel II: Prospects for Change Inside Iran

Panelists: Ali Alfoneh, American Enterprise Institute; Abbas Milani, Stanford University; Karim Sadjadpour, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

Moderator: Asli Bâli, UCLA

Panel III: Iran and the International Community

Panelists: Jon Alterman, Center for Strategic and International Studies; Dalia Dassa Kaye, RAND Corporation; Mahsa Rouhi, Harvard University

Moderator: Deborah Avant, UC Irvine

Panel IV: The US and Iran

Panelists: Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.), UCLA Burkle Center; Reuel Gerecht, Foundation for the Defense of Democracies; Trita Parsi, National Iranian American Council; Paul Pillar, Georgetown University

Moderator: Mike Shuster, NPR

To view complete coverage: international.ucla.edu/burkle/iran2011
Over the course of the year, the world has experienced a series of transformative events that not only promise to reshape global geopolitics but also profoundly affect US foreign policy and future diplomatic efforts. In response to calls for clarity and debate and drawing on experts from a variety of fields, Burkle Center Director Kal Raustiala moderated a series of events that offered differentiated perspectives, thoughtful deliberation, and a dispassionate assessment of these complex issues.

WikiLeaks

Part I: Implications for National Security and US Foreign Policy with Dalia Dassa Kaye, RAND Corporation; Robert Trager, UCLA Department of Political Science; and Amy Zegart, Burkle Center and UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs (Jan. 4, 2011)

Part II: Will WikiLeaks Transform American Diplomacy? with Geoffrey Cowan, USC Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism; and Ambassador Derek Shearer, Occidental College (Jan. 20, 2011)

Part III: What are the Legal Implications of WikiLeaks? with Norman Abrams, UCLA School of Law; David Kaye, Executive Director of the UCLA School of Law’s International Human Rights Program; Jon Michaels, UCLA School of Law; and Eugene Volokh, UCLA School of Law (Jan. 26, 2011)

Libya

Debating the Intervention in Libya with Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.); Asli Bâli, UCLA School of Law, and Kal Raustiala, UCLA Burkle Center Director (Apr. 11, 2011)

Photo above: Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.). Photos to right (from top): WikiLeaks panel participants Dalia Dassa Kaye, Kal Raustiala, Amy Zegart and Robert Trager; Iran conference audience members Dr. Kantathi Suphamongkon, Robin Carnesale and Albert Carnesale; Iran conference participants Asli Bâli and Abbas Milani; Iran conference participants Dalia Dassa Kaye and Deborah Avant; Iran conference participants Kal Raustiala, Etel Solingen, Bruce Jentleson, and Charles Kupchan
The Bernard Brodie Distinguished Lecture Series

Established in 1980, the Bernard Brodie Distinguished Lecture on the Conditions of Peace celebrates the memory of Bernard Brodie as an eminent scholar and teacher. The lectures provide a forum for outstanding scholars of politics, strategy, and warfare to present their ideas within the scholarly and humanist tradition exemplified by Bernard Brodie. Past presenters include Warren Christopher, former US Secretary of State; Jimmy Carter, former President of the United States; Yasuhiro Nakasone, former Prime Minister of Japan; and United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon.

Admiral Mike Mullen, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff

In Conversation with Renee Montagne, Co-host, Morning Edition, National Public Radio

UCLA Anderson School of Management, November 10, 2010

Admiral Mike Mullen is the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the highest-ranking officer in the U.S. Armed Forces and the President’s principal military advisor. As such, he advises the Secretary of Defense, the National Security Council and the Homeland Security Council. He has placed significant emphasis on the expansion of counter-insurgency warfare training and resources and was an early advocate for a greater focus on operations in Afghanistan. He now considers that war the U.S. military’s “main effort.”
Daniel Pearl Memorial Lecture Series

Established in 2002, the Daniel Pearl Memorial Lecture Series celebrates the life and memory of Daniel Pearl. A prominent journalist, inspired writer, and gifted musician, Daniel Pearl had dedicated his life to bringing joy and understanding to the world and to building bridges between diverse cultures. This annual lecture series in journalism and international relations has been delivered by scholars, journalists and policy makers who have contributed original analyses or constructive approaches to problems of international concern.

Leon Wieseltier

“Peace Process or War Process?”

UCLA Anderson School of Management, February 10, 2011

Leon Wieseltier is an American writer, critic, and magazine editor. Since 1983 he has been the literary editor of The New Republic. Wieseltier was born in Brooklyn, New York and attended Columbia University, Oxford University, and Harvard University. Wieseltier has published several fictional and non-fictional books including Kaddish, a National Book Award finalist in 2000, and Against Identity, a collection of thoughts about the modern notion of identity.

Arnold C. Harberger Distinguished Lecture on Economic Development

Established in 1997, the Arnold C. Harberger Distinguished Lecture on Economic Development celebrates Al Harberger as an eminent scholar and teacher. The lectures provide a forum for outstanding scholars of international economics and policy to present their views to the UCLA community.

Joseph Stiglitz

“America, Free Markets, and the Sinking of the World Economy”

UCLA Anderson School of Management, April 21, 2011

Joseph E. Stiglitz received his PhD from MIT in 1967 and in 1979 was awarded the John Bates Clark Award, given biennially by the American Economic Association. He has taught at Princeton, Stanford, MIT and was the Drummond Professor and a fellow of All Souls College, Oxford. Stiglitz teaches at Columbia University in New York and chairs Columbia University’s Committee on Global Thought. In 2001, he was awarded the Nobel Prize in economics for his analyses of markets with asymmetric information and was a lead author of the 1995 Report of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, which shared the 2007 Nobel Peace Prize.

News Coverage of Burkle Center Events

Select videos and podcasts of all Burkle Center events are available on our website: international.ucla.edu/burkle
BURKLE EVENTS

Burkle Talks

David Menashri, Tel Aviv University: “Israel, Iran, and the United States” (Oct. 4, 2010)

Dr. Kantathi Suphamongkhon, Burkle Center Senior Fellow: “A Unique Look inside North Korea: The Personal Experience of the 39th Foreign Minister of Thailand” (Oct. 29, 2010)

Skip Victor, Senior Managing Director of Duff and Phelps Corporation: “The Economic Crisis and You” (Nov. 4, 2010)

Robert Chesney, University of Texas School of Law: “Who May Be Killed? Anwar al-Awlaki as a Case Study in the International Legal Regulation of Lethal Force” (Mar. 9, 2011)

Laura Dickinson, Arizona State University, with special remarks by Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.): “Outsourcing War and Peace” (Apr. 6, 2011)

Film Screenings
Enemies of the People: A Personal Journey into the Heart of the Killing Fields with writer/producer Rob Lemkin (Oct. 20, 2010)

Fair Game (Oct. 29, 2010)

Climate Refugees: A Documentary Film about the Human Face of Climate Change with filmmaker Michael Nash (Nov. 17, 2010)

We thank our co-sponsors:
The UCLA Anderson Center for International Business Education and Research, The Daniel Pearl Foundation, Marschak Colloquium, UCLA Center for Korean Studies, UCLA Center for Southeast Asian Studies, UCLA Department of Political Science, UCLA International Institute, UCLA Institute of the Environment and Sustainability, UCLA School of Theatre, Film, and Television, UCLA School of Law’s International Human Rights Program, the Undergraduate International Relations Society (UIRS), Yitzhak Rubin Hillel Center for Jewish Life at UCLA, Younes and Soraya Nazarian Center for Israel Studies, and Zócalo Public Square.
Burkle Center Senior Fellows

The Center sponsors senior fellowships for former government officials and dignitaries knowledgeable in the field of international relations. The 2010–11 Senior Fellows are:

General Wesley K. Clark (ret.)
A four-star general, Gen. Clark was NATO’s Supreme Allied Commander in Europe under President Clinton and a presidential candidate during the 2004 campaign. In June 2009, President Obama appointed Gen. Clark to the President’s Commission on White House Fellowships. Gen. Clark is a non-resident Senior Fellow who makes scheduled appearances at various Burkle Center and co-sponsored events. He also lectures and guest-lectures at various UCLA departments and schools. Gen. Clark is a frequent TV and radio commentator and the prolific author of op-eds, articles, and books.

Dr. Kantathi Suphamongkhon
Dr. Kantathi Suphamongkhon, 39th Foreign Minister of the Kingdom of Thailand, and former Thailand Trade Representative, is a distinguished UCLA alum and resident Senior Fellow. He has served as Advisor on Foreign Affairs to several Prime Ministers and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives in the Thai Parliament. Dr. Suphamongkhon was elected to the Thai House of Representatives as Member of Parliament in 1995 and again in 2001. As Visiting Professor of Law and Diplomacy he teaches in the Global Studies Department, guest lectures at UCLA, assists in bringing world leaders to the UCLA campus and publishes op-ed articles in publications around the world.

Burkle Center Fellows

The Center also sponsors fellowships for outstanding UC faculty and experts in the field of international relations. The 2010-11 Fellows are Matthew Alexander, and Amy Zegart, Associate Professor, UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs.

Matthew Alexander
Alexander is an eighteen-year veteran of the Air Force and Air Force Reserves. As a former senior military interrogator, he conducted or supervised over 1,300 interrogations in Iraq and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for his achievements. Alexander is a four-time combat veteran of Bosnia, Kosovo, and Iraq. His articles have appeared in The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Los Angeles Times, The Guardian Online, The Daily Beast, Small Wars Journal, and The National Interest. He appears frequently on television and radio as an expert on interrogations. Alexander is also the author of How to Break a Terrorist and Kill or Capture.

Amy Zegart
Zegart is an Associate Professor of Public Policy at the UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs. Zegart is also a Research Fellow at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University. She was featured by The National Journal as one of the ten most influential experts in intelligence reform. She has also served on the National Academies of Science Committee on Behavioral and Social Science Research to Improve Intelligence Analysis, the FBI Intelligence Analysts Association National Advisory Board, and the Los Angeles Police Department’s Counter-Terrorism and Community Police Advisory Board. Her research examines organizational deficiencies of American national security agencies.
Articles

Select Media Appearances

Burkle Center Senior Fellow Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.) comments on the operation that killed Osama bin Laden and what happens to our mission in Afghanistan. CNBC’s The Kudlow Report. 4 May 2011.

Burkle Center Fellow Matthew Alexander discusses the intelligence that led to Osama bin Laden and whether torture and enhanced interrogation techniques should be used against terrorism suspects. Democracy Now. 4 May 2011.

Burkle Center Fellow Amy Zegart comments on Osama bin Laden’s death. KTLA and KPCC’s Air Talk. 2 May 2011.

Burkle Center Senior Fellow Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.) discusses whether the African Union is in collusion with Gadhafi. CNN. 11 April 2011.

Burkle Center Senior Fellow Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.) evaluates whether NATO can target Gadhafi’s forces and enforce the no-fly zone in Libya. CNN. 5 April 2011.

Burkle Center Senior Fellow Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.) discusses the challenges and consequences of a Libyan no-fly zone. CNN’s Anderson Cooper 360. 23 March 2011.

Burkle Center Senior Fellow Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.) explains the administrations military and political objectives in Libya. CNN’s The Situation Room. 23 March 2011.

Burkle Center Senior Fellow Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.) discusses a no-fly zone over Libya. Fox News. 4 March 2011.

Burkle Center Senior Fellow Gen. Wesley K. Clark (ret.) discusses the value and accuracy of the classified US military documents concerning the war in Afghanistan recently made public by the WikiLeaks website. CNN’s Larry King Live. 29 July 2010.

Burkle Center Senior Fellow Kantathi Suphamongkhon has commented on the Arab revolutions, humanitarian protection in Libya, United Nations and the Responsibility to Protect (R2P), the Thailand/Cambodia border conflict, the situation on the Korean Peninsula, and Thai Foreign Policy on six Thai television channels.
ALICE BELKIN MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIPS

The Burkle Center awarded Belkin Scholarships to two exceptional UCLA graduate students for the 2010–11 academic year. These scholarships were made possible by a generous gift from Alice Belkin and are intended to support outstanding minority graduate students who pursue studies related to the fields of globalization or international relations.

2010–11 Scholarship Recipients:

Farnoosh Hashemian
Farnoosh is a third-year student in the Public Interest Law and Policy Program at the UCLA School of Law. Prior to starting her legal education, she was a research associate at Physicians for Human Rights, where she led investigations on the consequences of human rights abuses at US detention facilities in Afghanistan, Iraq, and Guantánamo Bay. Farnoosh received her Master of Public Health from Yale University in 2005 and was awarded the Deans Award for Outstanding MPH Thesis.

Stephanie Santos
Stephanie is a PhD candidate at the UCLA Department of Women’s Studies. She grew up in the Philippines, where she worked as a journalist and a researcher with various NGOs. Her dissertation examines contemporary (post-1995) discourses of governmentality and development in the Philippines, focusing on how the state crafts restrictive forms of neoliberal economic citizenship that co-opt indigenous Filipinas into the flows of global capital.

BURKLE CENTER FACULTY RESEARCH PROJECTS

The Burkle Center supported three research projects led by UCLA faculty to promote collaborative study and analysis of significant questions within the realm of international policy and politics during the 2011–12 academic year.

The Effectiveness of Eco-Labels: An International Perspective
Principal Investigator: Magali Delmas, UCLA Institute of the Environment and Anderson School of Management

Research Project: The difficulty to solve environmental problems has generated the search for alternative governance mechanisms that involve a multitude of actors and organizations. A potentially effective option relates to disclosing information aimed at market actors and civil society via eco-labels. The goal of eco-labels is to elicit increased demand for products perceived as environmentally favorable. This research seeks to uncover the factors that facilitate or hamper the success of eco-labels, whether these factors differ in Europe and in the United States and how to predict the successful adoption of new eco-labels.

Cyberspace, The Globalization of Hinduism, and Protocols of Citizenship in the Digital Age
Principal Investigator: Vinay Lal, UCLA Department of History

Research Project: This project is positioned within the framework of the globalization of religion under conditions of modernity and India’s changing role in world politics. It will focus on the politics of democracy and authoritarianism in cyberspace, including the internet’s role in expanding and mobilizing both nationalist Hindus and their secular opponents within the Indian diaspora. It will also explore the transformation of Hinduism as it becomes a global faith, with an emphasis on the worldview of Indian American Hindus in particular.

Diplomatic Calculus: How States Draw Conclusions about Each Others’ Future Behavior
Principal Investigator: Robert F. Trager, Burkle Center Faculty Advisory Board, UCLA Department of Political Science

Research Project: This project focuses on the creation of a new dataset of state inferences about the future behavior and intentions of other states, and the development of grant proposals for the National Science Foundation, the European Research Council and other funding organizations. In the international relations field, no such dataset of inference currently exists despite the centrality of the question of how states draw inferences about each others’ future behavior. The dataset will draw on British inferences from 1854 to 1914, a period that saw many varying international contexts thus providing a unique resource for international relations scholars. Analysis of this data will be used in Trager’s book project, Diplomatic Calculus in Anarchy.

HSAC-BURLKE CENTER JOINT INITIATIVE

The Burkle Center is partnering with the Los Angeles Homeland Security Advisory Council (LAHSAC) and its President and CEO, former Los Angeles County District Attorney Ira Reiner, to further the efforts of HSAC to study and improve the security of the Los Angeles region.

In the coming year UCLA graduate and undergraduate students will work with HSAC on a variety of homeland security projects in Southern California. HSAC is a voluntary, non-partisan coalition of business, government, law enforcement and academic leaders who are dedicated to improving homeland security and the emergency response capabilities of the greater Los Angeles metropolitan area through public-private partnerships.
BURKLE CENTER STUDENT PROGRAMS

International Career Panels
The Center hosts two career panels per year that grant interested students access to professionals in the international relations arena, who discuss their respective careers and fields, share insights, and offer advice.

Panel I, February 22, 2011
Michael Dukakis served three 4-year terms as Governor of Massachusetts and was the Democratic nominee for the presidency of the United States in 1988.
David Kaye is the Executive Director of UCLA Law School’s International Human Rights Program and Director of its International Justice Clinic.
Nicholas Smith is a Masters Student in African Studies at UCLA with a concentration in Development Studies and the founder of a community based microfinance project in Western Uganda.

Panel II, April 28, 2011
Gary Bagley is the diplomat-in-residence at the Luskin School of Public Affairs at UCLA.

Student Advising
Undergraduate and graduate students interested in International Studies receive advice on international careers, internship opportunities, fellowships, and other available programs.

UCLA Study Abroad Fair (Oct. 5, 2010)
UCLA International Institute Open House (Oct. 12, 2010)
International Opportunities Fair (Nov. 16, 2010)

Undergraduate International Relations Society (UIRS) is a student organization that aims to engage students by providing a forum for communication about foreign affairs. It offers members different opportunities for involvement. UIRS also publishes an online journal, Student Voices, dedicated to students’ perspectives on global current events.
Anum Iqbal
UCLA ’11, History & Global Studies

“This internship allowed me to meet people from all different arenas of international relations, individuals such as Admiral Mike Mullen and Nobel Prize Laureate Joseph Stiglitz. It encouraged me to attend more events and lectures, and further expanded my interests in the field of international relations. Also, through the tasks we had to carry out, I learned to pay more attention to detail. And it was a great lesson in how to work with a team!”

Bret Johnson
UCLA ’12, Global Studies & Geography

“My experience as a Burkle Center intern offered me an unrivaled opportunity to translate my interest and passion for international relations into a real world work experience. I will look back fondly on my year at the Burkle Center and the relationships I made as a period in which I was challenged, nurtured and greatly rewarded.”

Anum Iqbal
UCLA ’11, History & Global Studies

Bret Johnson
UCLA ’12, Global Studies & Geography

“My experience as a Burkle Center intern offered me an unrivaled opportunity to translate my interest and passion for international relations into a real world work experience. I will look back fondly on my year at the Burkle Center and the relationships I made as a period in which I was challenged, nurtured and greatly rewarded.”

Anum Iqbal
UCLA ’11, History & Global Studies

“This internship allowed me to meet people from all different arenas of international relations, individuals such as Admiral Mike Mullen and Nobel Prize Laureate Joseph Stiglitz. It encouraged me to attend more events and lectures, and further expanded my interests in the field of international relations. Also, through the tasks we had to carry out, I learned to pay more attention to detail. And it was a great lesson in how to work with a team!”

Intern Spotlights

Mahmood Bakkash
UCLA ’11, Business-Economics

“My internship with the Burkle Center has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my three years at UCLA. The opportunities for professional and personal development are simply unmatched. The environment is friendly and efficient and fosters growth for both the individual and the group dynamic. I was exposed to many different aspects of the field of international relations which helped me discover a career path that I will be pursuing at law school. My work ethic and sense of professionalism were strengthened in such a way that will, without a doubt, aid me throughout my professional career. I highly recommend this internship to anyone who is interested in working in international relations with a group of individuals that will become valuable professional connections and, more importantly, good friends.”

Trisha Parikh
UCLA ’13, Economics & Political Science

“The Burkle Center internship has been an invaluable experience for me. The events were excellent and they gave me an opportunity to learn more about the international relations field. The Burkle Center staff and interns were very resourceful and working with them was a great learning experience that highlighted the importance of responsibility, teamwork and leadership.”

Burkle Center Work-Study Program

The Burkle Center launched its work-study program for UCLA students in 2008. This program allows qualified students to join a vibrant center, exercise and develop relevant skills and, similar to the internship program, gain direct exposure to leading experts as well as participate in exciting events in the field of international relations and related disciplines.

“As I complete my third and final year working at the Burkle Center, I have seen the internship program flourish with incredibly intelligent people from all different backgrounds. As an intern, you will be given access to world-class individuals in the field of IR. More importantly though, you will grow as an individual, both intellectually and personally, by working in a demanding and fast-paced environment with extraordinary people. There are few organizations on campus that have allowed me to fuse my interests in IR and multimedia technology, two fields that are crucial in our globalizing world.”

—Millie Tran, Multimedia Editor
UCLA ’11, Global Studies & Geography

For more information about the Burkle Center Internship Program or the Center’s student alumni, please visit our website and click on the Internship tab.
Deborah Avant, Professor of Political Science and Director of International Studies and the Center for Research on International and Global Studies, UC Irvine. Her research has focused on civil-military relations, military change, the privatization of security and global governance – particularly on security and the control of violence.

Edward Leamer, Professor and Chauncey J. Medberry Chair in Management, UCLA Anderson School. Leamer is director of the UCLA Anderson Forecast, which provides quarterly economic projections for the nation and the state of California. He is a frequent visiting scholar at the IMF and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Etel Solingen, Chair, Faculty Advisory Board and Chancellor’s Professor of Political Science at UC Irvine. She served as Chair of the Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation’s Steering Committee and is currently Review Essay Editor of the journal International Organization.

Arthur Stein, Professor of Political Science, UCLA. Stein specializes in international relations theory. He has served on the editorial boards of International Organization, the American Journal of Political Science, and International Interactions. In his courses, Stein examines such topics as ethnic conflict, terrorism, economic relations, and global governance.

Richard Steinberg, Professor of Law, UCLA. Steinberg teaches International Business Transactions, Public Intl. Law, Intl. Trade Law, National Security Law, Politics and Intl. Law, and Theories of Intl. Law. He is on the editorial boards of the American Journal of International Law and International Organization. Steinberg is also a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Robert Trager, Assistant Professor of Political Science, UCLA. Trager’s research focuses on how states form beliefs about the intentions of other states, and in particular on the role of diplomacy. He also works on the determinants of coercive success and international terrorism.

Amy Zegart, Associate Professor of Public Policy, UCLA and Burkle Center Fellow. For biographical information, please see Burkle Center Fellows on page 7.

Board Member Publications 2010-11

For publications by Amy Zegart, please see Burkle Center Publications on page 8.
ABOUT THE UCLA BURKLE CENTER FOR INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Created in 1979, the UCLA Burkle Center for International Relations fosters research and promotes discussion of relevant topics of international relations; US foreign policy; global political, military, and economic matters; and international law and dispute resolution. The Center sponsors conferences, lecture series, and other events that bring world leaders and internationally renowned scholars to UCLA and to the Los Angeles community. The Center offers funding opportunities for both UCLA students and faculty and supports student-led initiatives.

The Center is led by Director Kal Raustiala, who holds a PhD in Political Science and a JD, and is a professor at UCLA Law School and UCLA International Institute. Alexandra Lieben is the Center’s Deputy Director and holds a MA in Public Policy. Emily Moon is the Program Manager and holds a MA in International Education. The Center is supported by International Institute staff and counseled by a Faculty Advisory Board composed of distinguished experts in political science, law, public policy, business and media.

Core financial support for the Center is provided by a generous endowment from Ronald W. Burkle. Other major sources of support include the University of California, the UCLA International Institute, the University of California’s Institute on Global Cooperation and Conflict, Alice Belkin and other private donors.

SUPPORT THE CENTER

To maintain and enhance the quality of our research endeavors and public events over the coming years, the Burkle Center requires substantial support. Private philanthropy can make a critical difference.

To support our efforts with a tax-deductible donation of any size, please contact:

Maura Kleeman Resnick, Director of Development
11248A1 Bunche Hall, Los Angeles, CA 90095
Phone: (310) 825-6644
Email: mresnick@international.ucla.edu

Support Options include:

• Endow a student scholarship
• Fund a fellowship or support faculty research
• Support or co-sponsor public lectures and events

We also invite you to engage with our Center in other ways. To inquire, please contact:

UCLA Burkle Center for International Relations
11353 Bunche Hall, Los Angeles, CA 90095
Phone: (310) 206-6365
Email: burkle@international.ucla.edu

Options for Engagement include:

• Help publicize the Burkle Center and its activities
• Offer suggestions for future speakers or programs
• Keep us informed of other LA-based IR activities
• Volunteer to speak at the Center’s International Career Panels