

Competition for Dr. Sambhi Memorial Doctoral Research Summer Fellowships

The Center for India and South Asia (CISA) will award three research fellowships for graduate students for the summer of 2019. The maximum amount of the grant will be $2500. The fellowships should be used to enable doctoral students to travel to South Asia or to locations where South Asian archives are located to do research. Preference will be given to students in the early stages of their doctoral research, and to those who have been active participants at CISA events.

Please submit a 500 word proposal which clearly explains your research project, its significance, the work that you expect to do with the fellowship, and a justification for why you want to go to the places that you list in the proposal. Winning candidates will be expected to write a short report (1000 words) of what they accomplished that will be due on October 31. They will also be expected to regularly attend CISA talks in the 2019-20 academic year.
